

THE HAWAII MEDIATION PLEDGE

Mediation is a process that brings people together to talk, rebuild relationships and resolve conflicts creatively with the help of an impartial third person, the mediator.

Core values of living in Hawai'i include living with Aloha and nurturing relationships. I support these values by committing to use creative approaches to problem solving first, before going to court.

I recognize that all relationships encounter problems. I further recognize that we often negotiate, compromise and resolve problems in all relationships. In rare instances, problems may prevent disputes from being negotiated; hence we become involved in litigation.

To promote Aloha and nurture all relationships, whether in business, at home, or in the community, I agree that I will strive to resolve all disputes outside of litigation using alternative dispute resolution processes such as negotiation, mediation ho`oponopono, or other appropriate non-legal process.
